Doris Guo Biography

The general approach of Doris Guo's work comes out of a desire to capture ambient dispositions toward the social patterns and ritual dimensions of living. Rather than providing an explicit narrative that her sculptures become remnants of, she suggests oblique narratives and feelings by repurposing and recreating disparate objects and materials worn by human usage.

Working with a variety of materials and media her works are often produced from a journalistic approach to the feelings and affects of lived experience. The ambiances of the day-to-day remain a starting point of her practice as she works with readymades and the visual languages of interior spaces.

Born in San Francisco in 1992, Guo has lived in both Seattle and New York. The artist holds an MFA from Oslo National Academy of the Arts and currently lives and works in Oslo.
